What were the Fund costs for the last year? (based on a hypothetical $10,000 investment)

Fund name	Costs of a $10,000 investment	Costs paid as a percentage of a $10,000 investment
iShares Core S&P U.S. Value ETF	$4	0.04%

How did the Fund perform last year?

- For the reporting period ended March 31, 2025, the Fund returned 4.14%.
- For the same period, the S&P Total Market Index returned 7.09% and the S&P 900 Value Index™ returned 4.18%.

What contributed to performance?

Financial stocks were the leading contributor to the Fund’s return during the reporting period. While the Federal Reserve cut interest rates during the reporting period, they remained relatively high, keeping lending rates elevated and helping to boost net interest income (the difference between the rates banks charge for loans and the rates they pay for deposits) for banks. The capital markets industry further contributed, driven in part by growing trading volumes and investment banking revenues. Also benefiting performance were insurance companies, supported by rising premiums and growth in property and casualty names. Stocks in the consumer staples sector gained, particularly leading brick-and-mortar retailers with a focus on low pricing and everyday essentials. Additionally, these companies benefited from efforts to increase their e-commerce operations.

What detracted from performance?

The information technology sector was the main detractor from the Fund’s return during the reporting period. In the semiconductors segment, suppliers exposed to the PC, smartphone, industrial and automotive sectors generally saw fundamentals under pressure due to weak end demand conditions and excess inventory. These challenges compounded broader industry headwinds, such as a cyclical downturn in semiconductor capital spending and macroeconomic uncertainty. In the software subsector, a major firm detracted, due to decelerating growth in its cloud infrastructure unit and concerns about its artificial intelligence investment strategy. Consumer discretionary stocks also detracted as concerns over lingering inflation and the possibility of trade wars dampened consumer sentiment. This led consumers to prioritize their spending, and delay purchases on both nonessential goods and bigger ticket items.
